

National Work Readiness Credential

What does it mean for job seekers?

The Smart Center is now offering preparation and testing for the National Work Readiness Credential.

Job Seekers who complete this credential are required to pass four modules:

- Reading with understanding
- Using math to solve problems
- Situational judgment
- Active listening skills

This credential was developed with a panel of employers and the US Chamber of Commerce. These skills were determined to be the most important foundational skills necessary for a person to be successful in the workplace. This credential shows potential employers you are ready to be in the workforce. Learn more at:

<http://www.workreadiness.com/about.html>

Job Seekers who are qualified and better prepared to work in today's business environment!